Getting Farther Ahead by Staying Behind

Social promotion has long been the normal practice in American schools. Critics of this practice, whereby students are promoted to the next grade regardless of academic preparation, have suggested that students would benefit academically if they were made to repeat a grade. Supporters of social promotion claim that retaining students disrupts them socially, producing greater academic harm than promotion would. A number of states and school districts, including Florida, Texas, Chicago, and New York City, have attempted to curtail social promotion, by requiring students to demonstrate academic preparation on a standardized test before they can be promoted to the next grade.

This study analyzes the effects of Florida’s test-based promotion policy on student achievement two years after initial retention. The analysis showed that, after two years of the policy, retained Florida students made significant reading gains relative to the control group of socially promoted students. These academic benefits grew substantially from the first to the second year after retention. That is, students lacking in basic skills who are socially promoted appear to fall farther behind over time, whereas retained students appear to be able to catch up on the skills they are lacking. (excerpted from the report by Jay Greene & Marcus Winters - Manhattan Institute for Policy Research,)

This report sounds good, so Derek Briggs of University of Colorado reviewed the report for Think Twice. Think Twice provides the public and policymakers with timely, academically sound reviews of selected think tank publications. Briggs reported that the Manhattan Institute report overstates the effect of retention on student achievement. The report, “Getting Farther Ahead by Staying Behind: A Second-Year Evaluation of Florida’s Policy to End Social Promotion,” by Greene and Winters reaches findings that “are best described

Minutes in a Minute

October 18, 2006

Delta Kappa Gamma, Gamma Alpha chapter, met on October 18, 2006 at G Subu's Leather Bottle in Livonia. Fourteen members attended. Call to order came at 5:45.

The scheduled program, a presentation on the Tanzania Education Project by Rosalie Zuber was canceled. Ms. Zuber called that morning with her apologies. She has been ill.

Jackie, Judy and Amy reported on their attendance at the Fall Workshop at Soaring Eagle Resort. Sounds like they had a good weekend with informative sessions and networking time. Only a few quarters, nickels, and dollars were left behind.

A brief discussion about plans for the initiation of new members led to further discussion about attracting and keeping members. It appears that membership in a society of teachers may not be as attractive to many women in the profession as it once was. We are all asked to think of ways to keep our society of key women educators alive and vital. Gamma Alpha's membership is currently at 33 members. Colleen Fisher, Laura Barrett, Pat Curd, Joan Lyon (health reasons), Bonnie Schweitzer (health reasons), and Linda Fullerton have resigned their membership from the Society.

The popular Holiday Auction was discussed. It is scheduled for November 29 at G Subu's Leather Bottle. Initiation of new members will take place at 5:00. A buffet dinner will follow at 5:30. The auction will begin at 6:30. All members are urged to donate a couple items for the auction. Holiday craft items are always popular. Unique jewelry or collectibles are welcome. Homemade goodies usually go over well. A certificate for a massage or other pampering service is a wonderful auction item. Be creative with your donations and plan to come and bid on all the other items. Bring a guest or two. The success of the auction depends on many bidders. Money raised at the auction is used for our Grant-in-Aid. Hope to see you there with your guests and your checkbook. May you leave with some wonderful purchases.

For those who are interested, the Northeast Regional Convention will be held on July 25 – 28, 2007 at Grand Traverse Resort.

Gamma Alpha will co-chair the state convention at the Pontiac Marriott on the weekend of May 4, 2007. Plan to attend and to lend a helping hand.

MEA Urges: Vote Yes on Proposal 5

Proposal 5 is an investment in public education and Michigan's economic future. Voters need to show their support for Michigan's students by voting "yes" on Prop 5.

- Michigan families count on public schools to prepare their children for a successful future. Eighty percent of Michigan voters agree that we must shift our economic focus from auto plants to high tech jobs. Schools can't provide that focus without adequate resources and funding.
- If Michigan schools are going to prepare students for tomorrow's jobs and economy, they must receive adequate funding from the state. Failure to do so dooms our children's future and Michigan's economic future.
- To be eligible for the jobs of the future, students will need education and training beyond grade 12, but high tuition costs have kept college out of reach of Michigan's working families. Prop 5 will make college tuition affordable.
- Michigan's economy depends on quality schools, colleges and universities. Public education in Michigan won't survive if it must continue to deal with shrinking budgets and increasing costs.
- The strength of the Michigan public school system is a key factor in attracting new jobs to the state. By investing in public education now, we can create jobs, grow our economy and secure our children's future.

At the 2006 International Convention an amendment to the Constitution was approved that allows women with three or more years of experience as professional educators and who have been retired no more than two years at the time of their election to be issued an invitation to active membership.

Dr. Barbara Day is the newly-elected International President. Her biennium theme is “Leading with Wisdom and Passion.” She states in her “Greetings to Chapter Presidents” that we are an excellent Society; now our wisdom and passion must take us to significance. Are we the most significant society in the world for Key Women Educators? She implores us to use all of our wisdom (and we are blessed with plenty of it) and passion to make it so.

Dr. Day invites chapters to assess our excellence and tell how we can move beyond excellence to significance. During the year she asks Chapter Research Committees to give in writing the top three ways that their chapter is excellent and moving toward significance and how their chapter plans to become significant. She will share this information on our excellence and recommendations for $\Delta\text{K}\Gamma$ being recognized as the most significant international women’s educational society in the world.

as suggestive and merit further investigation” according to Briggs. In his review, he points out some principal shortcomings which undermine the validity of the report’s conclusions:

- The Florida policy doesn’t simply ‘retain’ third-graders who fail to achieve the threshold score in the state reading test, in the way the term is commonly understood. In addition to repeating the same grade, Florida’s policy also requires retained students to attend summer school and receive intensive remedial reading instruction.
- While using methods that appear to be appropriate, the authors “omit important information necessary to understand and evaluate” their statistical models, including important descriptive statistics about the samples of students analyzed in the study.
- The authors appear to overstate the retention effect that their report estimates. This is due to the way they quantify the magnitude of the results from their statistical analysis.

On the issue of other interventions that accompany retention, Briggs says that because Greene and Winters do not isolate effects of retention from those of summer school and intensive reading instruction, it is very difficult to conclude whether retention itself had a positive or negative effect.

President's Message

Get Smart!

Membership, membership, membership! Here are some more ideas generated by the attendees at the workshop hosted by International Membership Committee during the 2006 convention. We already implement many of the committee’s suggestions.

What are creative ways to nurture members?

- “We care about you” committee for taking care of sick members
- Celebration of birthdays – birthday cards
- Phone calls when members miss meetings – POSITIVE phone calls
- Rides for those who cannot drive themselves
- Different times and places for meetings
- Baskets for new teachers (treats, supplies – always chocolate!)
- Baby-sitting for members with children
- Volunteer to help with “big project” deadlines for working educators
- Mentor new members by making them known to the group
- Put new members on committees – involve them
- Encourage snowbirds to attend meetings and bring back ideas to their own chapter
- Mentor the members you sponsor
- Include as many as possible members in the meetings
- Recognize outstanding projects / programs of the working educators
- Use a member survey to see what members want
- Meals on wheels for members who need such – situations of illness, death
- Clarify roles of committees and encourage ACTIVE participation in them
- Have committee members sit together

Seven Purposes of The Delta Kappa Gamma Society International

- Try to do most of committee work at one meeting, rather than calling multiple meetings
- Vary meeting times and places
- Visit other chapters, and meet members from different areas
- Invite non-members to meetings and events
- Make meetings important – provide a reason for attending
- Advertise program topics ahead of time
- Involve as many members as possible in giving the program
- Be sure there is time for fellowship at all meetings
- Let member know that they were missed – in a positive way
- Call members about meetings – personal touch is so important – phone tree
- Carpool with older members
- Warmly welcome every member to every meeting
- Solicit member input and listen
- Newsletters are important for continuous contact with members

I look forward to your support of our Holiday Auction on November 29. Be sure to vote and have a happy Thanksgiving and see you at the Auction!

Jackie

Good Reading

The Lighthouse

By P.D. James

For those of you who love a good mystery, P.D. James is a must read. I just finished reading "The Lighthouse." This is James' thirteenth novel about the sensitive policeman/poet Adam Dalgliesh. Many of her books have been dramatized by the BBC and I expect this one will be seen on Masterpiece Theater in the future. As with any of her mysteries, "The Lighthouse" is a page turner with a very puzzling murder at its core.

As a policeman, Commander Dalgliesh is used to upheaval and uncertainty in his life. When the assignment comes that he is to investigate a mysterious death on Combe Island in Cornwall, he is torn between his job and his still new relationship.

The island a sanctuary for public officials and acclaimed individuals who wish to unwind from their hectic lives and be assured of safety and privacy. James is able to project the feeling of true isolation in her description of fictitious Combe Island. But paradise is disturbed when a famous novelist wishes to reside permanently on the island. He manages to make many enemies as he tries to set this plan in motion. When his body is discovered hanging from the island's lighthouse there are plenty of characters who had the motive to end his life.

Just like the television show, Lost, James gives readers the "back-story" of her characters before actually delving into the mystery at the core of the story. Over the course of James' thirteen books, Dalgliesh and the other main characters have grown and become very real people to me. But you don't have to have read all the previous books to enjoy "The Lighthouse." Sit down in your favorite easy chair with a cup of tea and a biscuit and be transported to Cornwall and "The Lighthouse." Enjoy.
